About The theme of the convention

Viksit Bharat represents the collective dream of Indians to see India as a developed nation in the centennial year of its Independence. India's demographic dividend lies in its youth power. If we are to solve the most pressing issues of our time, we need to tap into the dynamism of our youth within our institutions for they have the potential to ideate, innovate and be the most creative and vibrant force for social change. Most of our institutes of higher learning do strive at the holistic development of youth, aiming to empower them to become leaders and agents of social change and to develop their understanding of the value of self, service and social justice. Yet, we find many of the young around us caught up in a whirl of worldly enticements, enslaved by modern technology, consumerism and social fads, clearly lacking direction in themselves and in the very situations that threaten to adversely affect their present and future well-being. In the challenging times that we live in, it is not a healthy trend to see more and more young people turning into 'couch potatoes', as the society needs the vibrancy, dynamism and vision of the young minds. Ideas, innovations, and institutions takes human societies forward and shape the course of progress and development. These interconnected elements create a dynamic ecosystem that fosters creativity, problem-solving, and societal evolution. Institutions serve as catalysts, fostering environments where ideas can thrive and innovations can flourish. Conversely, successful innovations often challenge existing institutions, prompting them to adapt and evolve. This dynamic interplay between the three elements drives a continuous cycle of progress. Embracing the power of ideas, nurturing innovations, and building robust institutions are essential for steering societies toward a future marked by progress, sustainability, and well-being. It is through this harmonious collaboration that humanity can navigate the complexities of the modern world and forge a path towards a brighter tomorrow.

The National Youth Centric Convention on, 'Visionary Youth for Viksit Bharat: -Ideas, Innovations and Institutions as Enablers' aims to bring together youth from Institutions of Higher Education across the nation and their educators and mentors to discuss, deliberate and brainstorm on how to make our institutions of higher learning powerful in shaping visionary youth with the capacity to ideate and innovate for a developed India.
